

Suddenly little Alice saw walking toward her an enormous gander. He was so big he had to step carefully to keep from stepping on the houses. "Goosie, Goosie, Gander!" cried little Alice. "My! But how you have grown!—and what makes you all those colors? Why, you look as though you had fallen into an Easter egg factory!" exclaimed little Alice.

"I walked through the front of a rainbow, little Alice," said Goosie, "and the colors came off on me. Now I've got to find another rainbow and walk through the back of it. When I do that I'll be white again."

"But what made you grow so?" asked little Alice.

"Exercise," said Goosie. "Walking and walking to try to get around the rainbows and come through the back. It's very hard, little Alice, because they're always in front of you."

"But wouldn't it be the same thing if you walked backward through the front of one?" asked little Alice.

"That's a great idea!" said Goosie.

(To Be Continued Next Sunday)

Paint page with plain water to see what the rainbow did to Goosie Gander.